". . . forming an entity of many parts."

FOREWORD

In our four years at Weston High School the patterns of our lives have been deeply influenced not only by the stimulation of knowledge and its related applications, but by our relations with our teachers and our contemporaries. Many small day-to-day experiences have coalesced into the broad mosaic of our personalities. For this reason we have selected "Mosaic" as the theme of the yearbook of the Class of 1959.

Both as individuals and as a class we are allegorically similar to mosaics; to different viewers we present different impressions; we are not one integral thing, but rather a great composition of elements forming, as chips of colored glass form pictures, an entity of many parts. As a class, different shades of individuals have created the originality of our pattern, much as this is visible in our title page mosaic which was reproduced from the one in the First Parish Church in Weston. The scientists, the toolsmiths, the politicians, and the undecided personalities all have formed together an imposing scene. Much like little flecks of gold, the many outstanding members of our class, whose stories may be read throughout this book, create emphasis and draw the attention of the casual viewer to our story.

There is, however, one flaw in our analogy. A mosaic is a finished, stable thing, while we are constantly changing and adding new shades and colors to our own personal mosaics. Furthermore, some day the contributions of our class to the world will be like stone chips in a yet greater mosaic. Indeed, even now this process has begun.

Thus we present the yearbook of the Class of 1959 — "Mosaic 1959."

DEDICATION

Not only for the way in which you have counseled many of us in our preparations for further education and future life — and not alone for the unique way in which you introduced a great many of us to the mysteries of the circle and the triangle — not in essence for the championship basketball teams that you have produced — and not merely for what you have added through your personality to the great mosaic of our high school careers — but for all these things together, we dedicate MOSAIC 1959 to you, Mr. Robert Carini.

FACULTY AND STAFF

MOLDERS AND CEMENTERS OF

A MYRIAD OF PIECES

Mr. Teittinen. Fitchburg State Teachers College, welcomes the new Principal, Mr. Smith, Dartmouth and University of New Hampshire, to Weston High School.

The Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Brackett, Middlebury College, stands in front of the entrance to the high school.

The Administration Heads Weston's Able Faculty.

An organization is only as good as its leadership, and the quality of Weston High School is reflected by its administration. Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Anthony Brackett, is a busy man around Weston; besides working closely with the School Committee and PTA, he believes in close juxtaposition of students and administration, and consequently spends much time in the school.

The new High School Principal, Mr. Willard Smith, has aroused great interest with his novel policies of administration. He has constantly attempted to work as closely with the Student Council as possible. His Vice-Principal, Mr. Aimo Teittinen, has served in Weston for many years and has the unpleasant job of being in charge of discipline. The Director of Athletics, Mr. John Proctor, is very popular with all the students; this year's attendance at games testifies to this.

The clerical help of Mrs. Helene Minsky, Mrs. Marie Bassett, and Mrs. Elaine Sinclair is significant for both the work accomplished and the friendly assistance rendered to all students.

Mr. Proctor, Director of Athletics, Springfield College, stands in front of the ticket booth, headquarters of many sales activities.

Physical Education is a class enjoyed by everyone for the opportunity it renders for relaxation from the mental effort of studying. Miss Marie Butera, the girls' gym instructor, has a busy schedule teaching the gym classes and then coaching the after-school sports. She is well-liked for her ready smile and the understanding which she has for her students. With field hockey, basketball, softball, and tennis being played in the appropriate seasons, each girl has the opportunity to play the games which she enjoys and in which she is most skilled.

Mr. George Harris, an aggressive and good-natured man respected by his students, guides the boys through gym classes. They match their curriculum with varsity sports, with traditional football and cross-country in the fall, basketball through the winter, and baseball in the spring. Intramural competition is provided for those who enjoy sports activities but do not have time for regular after-school sports.

Science and Gym Develop Our Minds and Bodies.

Mr. Sawyer, University of New Hampshire, works with "the monster" which regulates the current throughout the laboratory.

Since man stands on the threshold of space, the science department of a school must prepare qualified scientists. Weston High School has been outstanding in this field with teachers such as Mr. Wallace Sawyer, Head of the Science Department, who is a great contributing factor. Mr. Sawyer is a man devoted to scientific education and conducts stimulating chemistry classes. His mannerisms are almost legendary throughout the school; he is a man not easily impressed by superficial things.

Instructor in both physical science and physics is Mr. Irving Marsden. He teaches the experimental class in "honor physics," developed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His ability to explain lucidly is utilized in this course, as is his patience with struggling young scientists.

One of Massachusetts' strongest biology programs is under the direction of Mr. Irving Keene. In his first year at Weston, Mr. Keene has filled the biology lab with five foot snakes, numerous guinea pigs, and a veritable jungle of plant life, as well as instituting field trips and mass dissections. Truly, he has been a great addition to the faculty.

Mr. Marsden, University of Maine, demonstrates the principle of radiant energy.

Mr. Keene, Middlebury College, is shown with some of the wildlife he has introduced into the school.

If you are in need of guidance of a personal or vocational nature, see either Mr. Charles Cummings, left, a Harvard graduate, or Mr. Robert Carini, right, a graduate of Clark University. Both are very patient and helpful to students seeking their aid.

From Books and Guidance We Cull Words of Wisdom.

An alumna of Goucher College, our librarian, Mrs. Signe Hynson, browses through one of the 3500 books in the school library.

In a school that sends over eighty percent of its students to some form of higher education, the Guidance Department plays a big and vital part in the curriculum. Senior member, Mr. Charles Cummings, lends a distinguished air to the high school. His Harvard dialect, coupled with his tall and slim build, make him a striking personality, as does his sure and friendly way of counseling. Mr. Robert Carini, who in past years has taught every subject from geometry to basketball, for the second year serves as a full-time vocational counselor. His understanding and friendly way make him a favorite of all the students, and as an adviser he is capable of making them feel truly at ease. The two counselors spend many hours before, during, and after school helping students arrange and rearrange their programs. With their help the seniors apply to the colleges of their choice.

All the subjects in Weston High School seem to revolve around the library facilities. The writing of themes and source papers results in steady use of the plentiful reference works and volumes kept in their proper sheaves and files. The librarian, Mrs. Signe Hynson, not only handles the job of guiding students from volume to volume, but keeps quiet and order in crowded library study halls. Long will we remember the requests over the public address system for the return of overdue books before each vacation, and the tolerant way in which she has always lent us the pencils and compasses we have forgotten. A popular feature of the library is the rack of up-to-date popular magazines, a good bibliography of more advanced publications, and the local daily newspapers. While we work on our papers and homework, we can look out the window towards the athletic fields, and below us, the sounds of the shop filter up to us.

Mrs. Hynson is always around to help anyone who needs assistance in finding a book or reference volume in the library.

The industrial arts program in Weston High School has shown its excellence by the large number of national awards that Weston receives each year. It is divided into two main sections: "shop" and mechanical drawing. Instruction in the shop is handled by Mr. Donald Hale, a quiet and competent teacher with a pleasantly tempered sense of humor. Perhaps, one of the more well-known parts of the shop curriculum is the senior auto mechanics course. Mr. Aimo Teittinen, the school's Vice-Principal, teaches mechanical drawing. Students leave him with a keen understanding of the T-square and triangle.

Mr. Aimo Teittinen and Mr. Donald Hale inspect a welding job by one of their Auto Mechanics students.

Students Learn the Practical Arts for Future Use.

One of Weston's newest and most unique teachers, Mrs. John Melone, handles instruction in the home arts. Mrs. Melone teaches sewing, foods and cooking, and education for family life, a course popular among seniors, and is known for her new method of handling the perpetual cafeteria study hall problem.

Mrs. John Melone is now heading the Home Economics Department of Weston High School.

Mr. Cronan, Notre Dame, is shown with Weston's 1959 drivers' education car.

A relatively new class at Weston, long sought after by the Student Council, Driver Education has in its two years eased the automobile insurance burdens of many Weston parents. The classes, administered by Mr. Leo Cronan, are of two varieties. The class as a whole attends lectures and films on proper road attitudes, safety, and the theory of proper driving; then, in groups of two or three, they go on the road to learn the actual art of motoring. These classes do not neglect lessons in the mechanics of automobiles and it is rarely that the Registry Inspector fails anyone, even for improper turning on a hill. Through the personal contact he has with his students, Mr. Cronan displays the ability to be a fine "associate counselor." His quiet, good-humored ways will long be remembered by us.

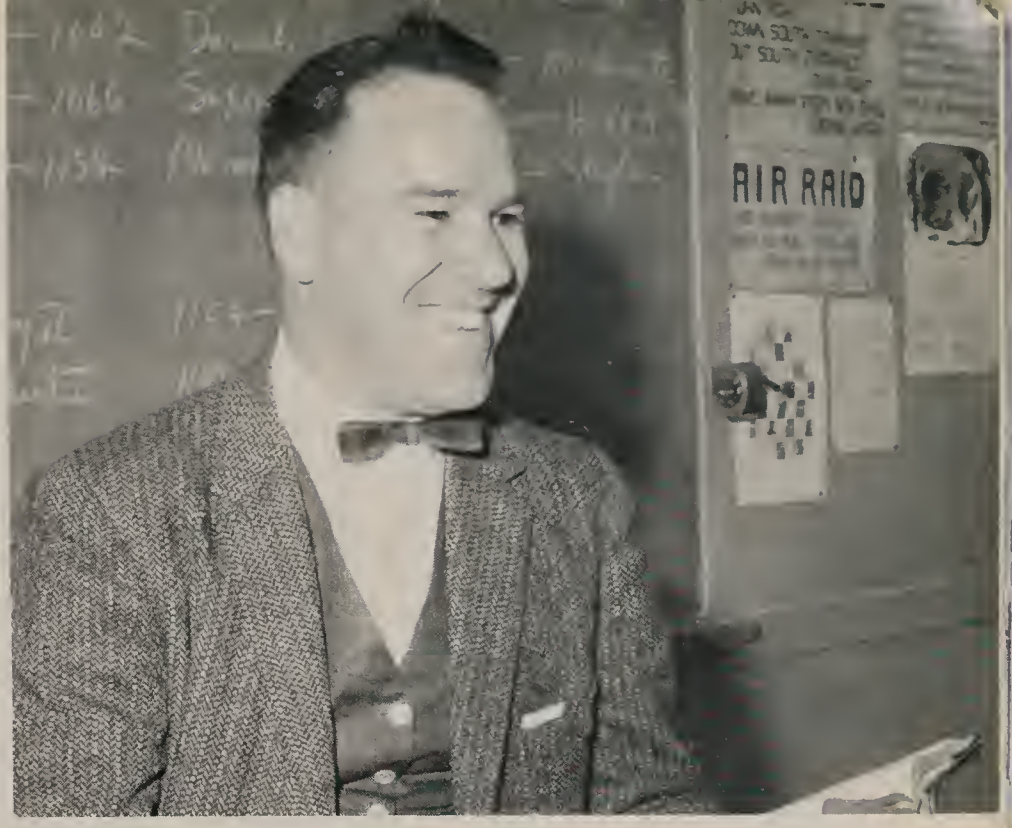
They Are Interested in the World and Its Problems

Mr. Cummings, Harvard, Mrs. Lenrow, Swarthmore, and Mr. Cronan, Notre Dame, stand in front of one of the many maps used in illustrating social studies at Weston. Not shown is Mr. Killebrew, Boston University.

Mr. Smith, Brown University, Head of the Social Studies Department looks at one of the visual aids used in his classes.

Social Studies at Weston High School is an extremely unified set of courses, beginning with studies of World Geography in the freshman year, and climaxed by an almost seminar-like class in Modern Problems in the senior year. Instruction in the geography course is handled by Mrs. Ruth Lenrow. In the sophomore year, Mr. Frederic Killebrew's wry humor and insight into political theory makes World History a pleasant course. The Junior Class studies American History under Mr. Norman Smith, whose pleasant nature is exemplified by the time he spends giving tutorial aid to his students after school. The leadership of the Modern Problems classes is the responsibility of Mr. Leo Cronan, Mr. Charles Cummings, and Mr. Norman Smith. This class is highlighted by fiery discussions and two thousand word papers.

The high scores of Weston High School seniors on the English sections of the Boston University battery and the Iowa tests indicate the high level of the English education of the school. The English Department directed by Mr. Paul Mitchell is comprised of instructors of state-wide renown. Mr. Mitchell himself is known for his ready wit, coupled with a sure and understanding handling of his students. He conducts English classes which are the high points in his students' days. Mr. Robert Lavelle and Miss Claire McDonough, who advise the newspaper, apply their skills in syntax and appreciation of literature to the underclass groups; Mrs. Ruth Lenrow, with her southern accent, and Mr. John Zorn, who conducts an "English workshop," complete the department.



Mr. Mitchell, Boston University, is the highly esteemed Head of the English Department.

and Extend Their Knowledge of Their Own Language

Miss McDonough, Radcliffe, Mr. Lavelle, Montclair State Teachers' College, and Mrs. Lenrow, Swarthmore, are caught in an informal pose at an English Department meeting.

Mr. Zorn, University of New Hampshire, is shown holding one of his microphones.

The importance of speech is stressed in the high school more than it has been in past years. Speech Arts is taught very thoroughly by Mr. John Zorn, a good-natured man, well-known for his enthusiasm for his course. Students taking this course learn correct speaking habits and become more at ease when speaking publicly.

Remedial reading is a non-credit course for improving reading habits. Under the able guidance of business-like Miss Callahan, many readers have increased their reading speeds considerably.

Miss Callahan, Boston University, demonstrates the use of the reading accelerator.

Business courses are offered for those who are interested in secretarial positions following high school. Mrs. Thelma Hoyle, a cool and reserved woman, diligently works to help her students improve their skills in typing and shorthand. A half-year typing course is designed for students wishing to learn the basic typing skills for use in personal work. Advanced typing and stenography courses are taught to future secretaries. Office practice gives valuable experience to the students in preparation for secretarial jobs.

Mrs. Hoyle, Salem State Teachers College, explains the use of the duplicating equipment.

While Being Introduced to Foreign Ones.

The progressive outlook of language instruction at Weston High School is represented by such unique institutions as instruction in Russian and four years of French, both unusual in schools of Weston's size. The department leadership offered by Mrs. Theresa Zamprogno is greatly responsible for this. An energetic and much respected woman, the forceful and personal delivery of her subject, French, rank her high in student popularity. The other French teacher, Mrs. Venezia Mezzacappa, in her first year at Weston, has introduced remarkably analytical methods of language instruction.

Latin, always a well-populated class, is taught by Mrs. Bucuvalas, a teacher with a delightful sense of humor and lively teaching methods. Russian, a strange language to sophomores, juniors, and seniors studying it, is handled by Mr. Frederic Killebrew, a man with a subtle wit and an extremely "human" attitude.

Mrs. Zamprogno, Boston University, rings the bell that has quieted many classes.

Mrs. Bucuvalas, Middlebury College, indicates the correct use of Latin verbs.

The smile of Mrs. Mezzacappa, Boston University, gives some indication of her personality.

Mr. Killebrew, Boston University, explains the significance of certain Russian symbols.

Mr. Corley, Boston University, is the Director of Music in the Weston schools.

Mr. Robert Corley, director of music at Weston High School, has in two years injected tremendous vitality into Weston's band and orchestra. Never one to withhold a deserved criticism to any errant musician, Mr. Corley's know-how is shown by constant "A" ratings received by Weston groups at music festivals. Also, he has originated many brilliant half-time displays at the football games.

Aided by her vivid imagination and natural art talent, Miss Alice M. Olliff, Art Department Head, provides her students with an interesting art program. Each year's prom decorations become reality only through her sage advice. A hobbyist photographer, her ability in this field goes far beyond the connotation assigned to "amateur."

Miss Olliff, Massachusetts School of Art, stands in front of some samples of her students' work.

Many Explore Mathematics and the Fine Arts.

Mrs. Ellsworth, Wheaton and Smith; Mr. Stuart, Albany State Teachers' College; Miss Zelinka, University of Vienna, Austria; members of the Mathematics Department contemplate mathematics models.

From the basic fundamentals of arithmetic to advanced studies in the theory of limits, the teaching of mathematics in Weston High School has gained respect with college admissions boards throughout the nation. The staff, headed by Miss Helen Green, who has been cited for "excellence in mathematics teaching" by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, includes Mrs. June Ellsworth, respected for her clear and concise handling of teaching; Mr. Robert Stuart, a competent teacher; and Miss Martha Zelinka, perhaps the school's most forceful and direct teacher. Miss Green herself, the senior member of the high school teaching staff, needs no description. Her understanding and brilliant instruction will be remembered by her students long after their college graduations.

Miss Green, Boston University, standing with her renowned rubber tree, is Head of the Mathematics Department.

Standing with some of the machinery used in preparing meals are cooks Mrs. Foote, Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Jacques, and Mrs. Riley.

Valuable Services Rendered Are Highly Appreciated.

For any organization to function at top efficiency, it must have a competent and skilled group of personnel handling its basic mechanics. This is the function filled by the bus drivers, custodians, and kitchen help.

Our bus drivers are often not appreciated. The ferrying of thirty to fifty individuals in the age bracket of eight to eighteen is no easy task; yet they do their work cheerfully and inspire the confidence of the parents.

During the day, the kitchen help works arduously to prepare food for almost four hundred hungry people. Mrs. Burke's and Mrs. Riley's smiling faces hover over the serving spoons, making the day more pleasant. In these days, it is hard indeed to find a good lunch for twenty-five cents.

Janitorial help at Weston High School is not only effective, but it is also pleasant and cooperative. Mr. Merrill, Mr. Cain, Mr. McLeod, and Mr. Clarke are always ready to maintain the building and to help students with their individual plights.

Weston can easily claim that "The people behind the faculty" are among the best.

Shown with one of the fleet of buses are bus drivers Mr. DeLorrie, Mr. Cronin, Mr. Dolph, Mr. LaCross, Mr. White, and Mrs. McAuliffe.

The upstairs custodian, Mr. MacLeod, and the downstairs custodian, Mr. Clarke, stand in front of the gym door.

High School Students Take A Look At Weston's Alumni

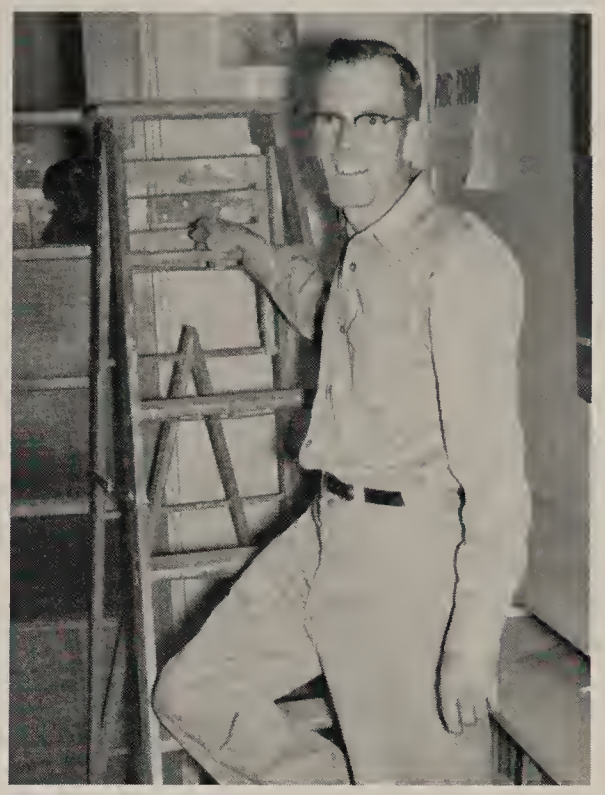
THOMAS CLARKE

Perhaps the alumnus best known to the graduating class is Tom Clarke, who graduated with the class of 1931. As custodian of the high school, Mr. Clarke, affectionately known to all as "Tom," has played a major part in the story of our class through its four years in high school.

In his high school days, Tom distinguished himself in school athletics, starring on the varsity teams in baseball and ice hockey. Besides excelling in athletics, Tom won numerous speaking competitions and was president of his class for three years.

While in Weston, Tom has compiled an impressive record of town service. He has been President of the Alumni Association for two years, and shown that he is an accomplished Thespian by performing in plays produced by the Kiwanis Club, the Alumni Association, and local church groups. He has been publicity chairman for the Boy Scouts, and has served on the Property Committee of the Baptist church.

Tom Clarke, a very real and dear friend to every member of our class, has truly earned the respect and affection of the school and the community.



Thomas Clarke

GRANT MERRILL PALMER, JR.

An alumnus of the class of 1917, Grant Merrill Palmer graduated in a class of thirteen, at a time when the high school was lodged in the recently renovated Building B. He played left field on the baseball team for three years and participated in school plays. Upon his graduation from Weston High School, he was awarded the Paine Scholarship; and with this he attended Harvard.

Mr. Palmer now lives on Hilltop Road and has two daughters who are also alumnae of Weston High School. He has been practicing law in Boston since his graduation from Harvard Law School.

Besides being a lawyer, Mr. Palmer influences the community through his activities as town library trustee, town council member, and member of the Unitarian Church Standing Committee. He served as chairman of the committee which determined the plans for Building C. He has served on the School Committee and as town clerk, and has been president of the P. T. A. and the Alumni Association.

Class of 1958

To See What They Are Doing.

Many times alumni from the Class of 1958 return to football and basketball games, reunions, and town functions. Not only for this reason are they of interest, but also because we still remember their activities while we were juniors — their "cowboys and Indians" April Fool's Day; their "Supreme Senior" slogan; and their individual habits. Thus we present the Class of 1958 and their activities at a year after their graduation.

The Freshmen Work Hard to Gain Knowledge

The freshman year opens an entirely new way of life for the one hundred twenty members of the class of 1962. For the first time they are offered choices in courses, and they carefully plan their high school futures. All the trademarks of high school life—homework, "formal" lunch periods, and many other things which were formerly sampled, are now actually lived for the first time.

Freshmen begin to sample the choice of outside activities in Weston High School. For the first time mathematics, science, and languages are seen as forms of recreation. The freshmen participate in such activities as choir, band, and orchestra as well as the other high school activities. Junior varsity teams take a good part of the freshman athletes, who show potential for several years ahead in Weston's athletic contests.

Politics and science become part of the way of life for the freshmen of 1959, and although the ranks are thinned by emigrants to private school, there is still a tremendous scholastic potential remaining.

Freshmen will remember the physical science course, "realistic" plays in social studies, and mathematics courses geared to our Sputnik Era.

The Sophomores, Who Look Back with Satisfaction,

The rigors of the freshman year completed, students of Weston High School proceed to that wonderful year of the tenth grade. Conditioned to the patterns of high school life, yet still unexposed to the constant strain of work of the upper classes, the sophomores have had their first lessons in the science of frogs and geraniums under Mr. Keene's laboratory-centered tutelage, and have for the first time been exposed to Russian, a totally new language to them.

Sophomores begin to establish the patterns of their personalities by seriously selecting the range of their extra-curricular activities. Already, the sophomore

The tenth grade has been represented in the Student Council this year by Steve Richardson, Bob White, and Jan Olson. The Junior Year, the Year of the Prom,

This year, as juniors, the Class of 1960 learned the meaning of the word "work." Many things such as the necessity of preliminary college applications, preparation of graduation decorations, the many hours of work for the Junior Prom, and the academic work of the junior year impressed them as their own senior year rapidly approached.

One of the strongest features of this class is its leadership which promises to continue next year. Leading personalities have contributed this year as class officers, newspaper staff, and club members.

Scholastically, the Junior Class has been exposed to a new class in "honor chemistry," designed to delve deeply into theoretical aspects. Some juniors have also elected to take Russian, a new course in Weston.

In athletics the Junior Class provided the football team's almost unstoppable left halfback, Jay Adams, whose raging lunges through opposing lines kept opposing coaches in nervous agony.

FIRST ROW: G. Goodall, E. Lombard, H. Hartwell, V. Laughner, B. Eaton, N. Locke, J. Harding, S. Hamill. SECOND ROW: Mrs. Mezzacappa, P. Johnson, G. Graham, S. Gibbons, J. Ellis, M. Hanson, D. and Their Last Year as Underclassmen.

One of the basketball team's leading players was high-scoring Terry Dunn; and Read Langenbach was the cross-country squad's fastest member.

As prospective seniors who must represent the school and its activities, the Juniors presage a successful year ahead.

Mr. Sawyer's X-period chemistry laboratory is a typical junior classroom. The enthusiasm shown is characteristic of the way in which Weston's science program has responded to the pressure of the times.

Caught in the art room making plans for their Prom are Junior Class Secretary Maribeth Hanson, President Fred Crawford, Vice-president Esther Lombard, and Treasurer Beverly Eaton.

Here Are the Leaders of the Underclassmen.

The activities of each class are directed by its elected officers. The president presides over class meetings, directs discussions, and organizes the necessary committees. The vice-president is an ex-officio member of the committees formed, and with the other officers helps to plan class activities. The job of the secretary is to keep an account of class meetings, committees, and other activities. Of course, the treasurer has the all-important job of handling financial affairs.

Great demands are placed on the leaders of Weston High School, and this year's class officers successfully fulfilled these demands. Their numerous responsibilities oblige the class officers to give up much of their spare time in order to carry out their duties. There is every evidence that this year's officers have shown not only a high degree of leadership, but also a cheerful willingness to sacrifice their time and effort to their respective classes.

FRANCOISE MARIE CILLY

Sue Smith and Betty Luther contemplate some homework in Federal Income Tax computation, such as is given in the business courses at Weston High.

Three Weston students intimately connected with the Class of 1959, yet holding positions unique to the general body of the class, deserve special mention in Mosaic 1959.

Francoise Cilly, affectionately known by a spectrum of nicknames from "Francette" to "Fif," was 1959's exchange student from Rombas, France. She has proven herself more than just a guest by joining with us in our activities, never aback and always welcomed. Francette's gay humor has added much to the Class of 1959.

Tom Kelly terminated his high school career one year early to attend Johns Hopkins University. Tom, a talented scientist and diligent student, retained his ties with Weston High throughout his freshman year in college, and returned to graduate with us.

Susan Toner spent the school year of 1958-9 in Rombas, France, depriving us of her delightful personality and ready wit. Sue's unique talent in languages has been most useful to her in her new environment, and her return to Weston will be eagerly awaited by the Class of 1960.

ACTIVITIES

ACCENTUATING THE LARGEST MOSAIC OF ALL —
THAT OF THE SCHOOL YEAR

The Right Combination of Headache, Hard Work and Fun

Relaxing on the unfinished throne are John Perry and Jim Robbins.

Several Prom Committee members with Mrs. Zamprogno are L. Johnson, J. Robbins, C. Howard, S. Bump.

The sight of the gym at eight o'clock on Friday evening, May 10, 1958, provided a fitting culmination to the efforts of the Junior Class members who had worked so arduously to make "Paris au Printemps" Weston's finest Prom. With the needed and much appreciated aid of Mrs. Zamprogno, Mr. Mitchell, and Miss Olliff, the gym was successfully transformed into "Paris in the Spring," complete with the blinking Eiffel Tower, baskets of flowers, and the immense pictorial map of Paris concealing the bleachers and supply closet doors.

Our class father, Mr. Alan Winsor, serves punch to four thirsty boys: John Garabedian, Roger Drowne, Peter Lawson, Dennis Cribben.

Queen Linda Rudell feeds cake to her date, Alvin Wormwood, while three members of her court — Ann Kellogg, Janet Reidel, and Barbara Gaudreau watch.

Results in an Unforgettable Prom

The lovely Prom Queen, Linda Rudell, is crowned by Peter Bryant, Junior Class President.

Standing behind the refreshment table to cut the cake are the Queen and her deserving court: Lee Hibler, Judy Sherman, Laurie Shepardson, Pam Robb, Linda Rudell, Ann Kellogg, Janet Reidel, Barbara Gardreau, Bunny Rizzo.

Checking the office's master file are Literary Editor Arsine Avakian, Activities Editor Sue Ferries, Senior Editor Laurie Shepardson, and Advisor Mr. Lavelle.

Sports Editors Ann Kellogg and Steve Green inspect some athletic equipment.

The Yearbook Staff Scrambles to Meet Deadlines

The elements that go into the production of a successful yearbook — labor at all hours, writing, editing, cropping and composing, Saturday afternoons spent pursuing advertisements, and disturbed classes in photographing school activities — are among the many things that went into the publication of Mosaic 1959.

The staff will always remember the period from September to March when they pieced Mosaic together. The after-school sessions in Room 202 represent many hours of productive work as well as pleasant sociability.

A tremendous vote of thanks is due the faculty advisor, Mr. Robert Lavelle who, besides being the final inspector, kept our spirits up with his inimitable humor; an expression of gratitude is also due the underclassmen who helped in processing photographs.

The 1958-1959 school year highlighted many important activities. Mosaic has attempted to tell the story of these events.

Co-editors Sue Bump and John Russner check senior pictures.

Sales Manager Jim Robbins chats in the office with Advertising Manager Janet Woodland and Business Manager Bruce Hamill, who has spearheaded Mosaic finances.

Mosaic's art staff includes Artist Frank Best, Photography Editor LeeLee Johnson, and Head Photographer Larry Forman.

Faculty and Alumni Editor Celia Melone dictates to Clerical Editor Lee Hibler.

Editor-in-chief John Garabedian checks some data being discussed by Mr. Lavelle and Miss McDonough, advisors.

Art Editor Joe Ewers and Exchange Editor Cora Schulmann give suggestions to Photography Editor Bill Bullock on picture posing.

and Keeps in Close Contact with the News Magazine Staff.

Weston High School's news magazine the Smoke Signal, continued with improvements which included renovations in format, style, and policy this year. A unified and enthusiastic staff headed by Editor-in-chief John Garabedian, worked hard to produce a superior piece of journalism and to keep the paper financially solvent despite loss of circulation due to the moving of the seventh and eighth grades to a separate unit. However, the paper was successfully sold to townspeople in the two local drug stores as well as being circulated throughout the school.

Coverage extended beyond that of previous years to more editorializing and interviewing of outside personalities. Besides fulfilling its role as "the news magazine of Weston High School" it acted as a liaison between the student body and the administration.

The many hours spent by the staff in selling ads and producing and setting up the magazine were well indicated and rewarded by the quality of the publication.

Sports Editor Karen Beamish and Circulation Manager Nancy Locke check Business Manager Nell Angelo's calculations.

Helpful Assistants Gain Practical Experience.

Whenever a teacher fails to post an attendance slip outside the room an office assistant comes in to get it. This is only one of the countless duties performed by this highly efficient staff of girls that provides much-needed help for the three secretaries. Among the other chores of these assistants are answering the telephone and carrying messages throughout the school to both teachers and students. The library assistants give Mrs. Signe Hynson, the librarian, the opportunity to donate more of her time to helping the students use the library more effectively by signing out books, filing cards, and sending out notices for overdue books. Both the office assistants and the library assistants donate study hall time to do this work, which deserves high commendation.

LIBRARY ASSISTANTS: E. Avigdor, S. Jones, J. Peterson, K. Curtin, C. Mooers, N. Clark, B. Chynoweth, G. Rollins, M. Gowell, J. Ellis, S. Gibbons, E. DiBiase, Mrs. Hynson.

Janet Ellis, performing one of the innumerable duties of office assistants, uses the public address system.

The Discussion Club Examines Problems of the World,

In 1958-9 the Discussion Club at Weston High assumed a major role in the school through its work with joint subcommittees with the Student Council. In addition to its usual program of discussions of topics currently interesting to the juniors and seniors who comprise the membership of the club, it shared the job of preparing the student report to the committee planning the new high school, to be built in the near future.

Mr. Charles Cummings, under whose apt guidance the club functions, says that a major function of the club is to stimulate the thinking and the enthusiasm of its members towards exchange of ideas, and the heated debates which often occur would tend to indicate a fine consumation of his ideals.

Each year the Discussion Club has an outing to some New England area and a final discussion at the home of a member, thus providing a fitting culmination to the year's activities.

As Council Members Try to Solve Those of the School.

Immeasurably assisted by the cooperation of Mr. Willard Smith, the principal, the Weston High Student Council moved forward to a year of notable progress. All sixteen council members, representing the four classes, worked diligently on projects ranging in scope from the institution of a "teen canteen" to the preparation of a report on the possibility of an honor system in the school.

Highlighting the mid-year report of the council to the school was the presentation of an official handbook. During the first half year the council also carried out such tasks as the preparation and presentation of a report on the suggested features of the new high school, and the addition of music to the cafeteria.

The work of the council would have been impossible but for the advice of Mr. Paul Mitchell, who acted as principal liaison between faculty and the council, and also suggested many profitable courses of council action. The ovation given the council at each assembly as new reports were made to the school bore out student opinion of the council work, and verified the council slogan — "achieving by doing."

With Mr. Mitchell, advisor, are the Student Council officers: B. White, vice-president; S. Herrick, treasurer; J. Olson, secretary; J. Reissner, president.

Scholarship Is Recognized Through the Honor Society.

The senior members who were elected in their junior year are Sue Bump, Alan Scott, Ann Kellogg, Sally Ayers, Ann Wolff, and Arsine Avakian.

Weston High School's honorary organization, the Carl T. Rhoades Chapter of the National Honor Society is comprised of seniors and juniors who have outstanding scholastic records, and who possess qualities of leadership, service, and character. Selection is made by the faculty on the basis of the scholastic records and these other characteristics. Several sophomores are also designated as provisional members.

1959's induction ceremony was unique in its originality of concept; the program was different from that of other years and featured an inspiring address by Reverend Sandy McEacherin.

The caliber of the National Honor Society membership may easily be seen by the achievements of the various members; its example is a glowing one indeed.

Enthusiastic Students Participate in One

With the advent of Russian in Weston, the Russian Club under the direction of Mr. Frederic Killebrew came into being. In the words of President Kepler Stone, the function of the organization is to "increase our understanding of the Russian people," and an informative program has helped the club in working toward its goal.

The Camera Club, although limited in membership, is high in educational opportunities. The members of this club both take and develop their own pictures. Weston High's darkroom facilities are often used by the members, both for experimentation, and for the processing of their work. The advisor, Mr. Irving Keene, and the officers have worked in harmony with the members to produce an active group centered about learning better photography.

As in past years, the Art Service Club has been of great service to the school. The members, together with their expert advisor, Miss Alice M. Olliff, have made numerous posters and signs for school and community affairs, and have demonstrated their talents by arranging artistic displays in the showcase. This club is vital to the communications in Weston High School.

Whether with the French Christmas party, with the reception for Weston's exchange student, or with the various club programs, Weston High School's French Club has demonstrated versatility and originality in its work. Under Mrs. Venezia Mezzacappa's guidance, this club, the largest in the school, typifies the broadening curriculum.

The Affiliation Club has also been an active organization this year. Pen-pal correspondence between Rombas and Weston students has been continued and the club has worked on the sale of stationery. On the non-profit side the Affiliation Club joined with the French Club to hold a reception for Francette Cilly, the French exchange student from Rombas. We congratulate the officers and Mrs. Zamprogno for again producing a highly educational and profitable year for Affiliation supporters in the high school.

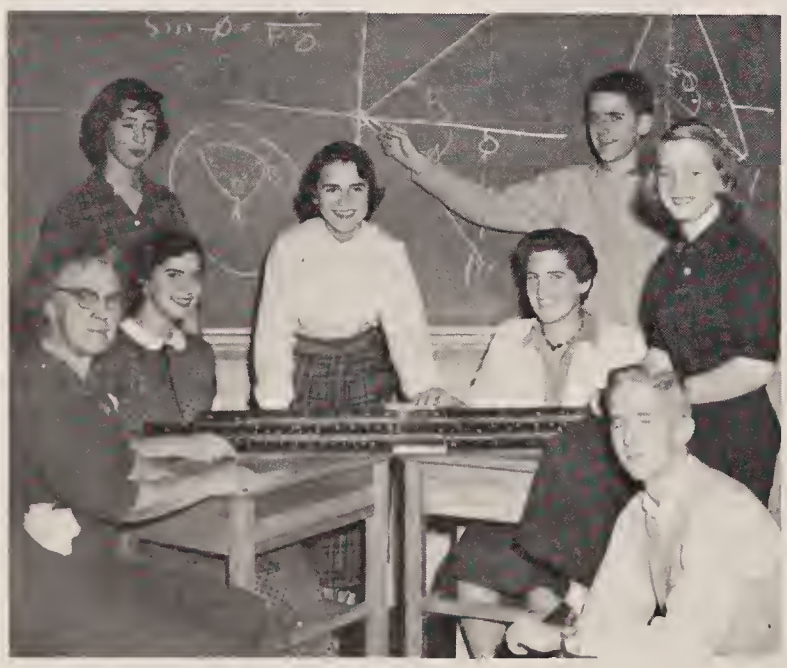
Keeping the Classrooms and Corridors Populated

Weston High School's Mathematics Club has provided the ultimate of club organization and achievement in the school for many years. This year a powerful program of guest speakers, work and recreational meetings, and the annual guest meeting in May was provided.

Again advised by Miss Helen Green, this year's Math Club worked to improve the distribution of its publications. These booklets are already in demand over much of the country.

The two officers, excluding the directors from each of the four classes, are juniors, which indicates that the group will probably find few problems in maintaining its enviable position in the school next year.



Discussing some mathematical concepts are: Miss Green, Advisor; A. Corman, Program Chairman; A. Avakian, Secretary-Treasurer; R. Wile, Freshman Director; E. Lombard, President; D. Wigginton, Public Relations Committee Chairman; S. Bump, Senior Director; and L. Rydell, Junior Director.

Science club officers: Sue Bump, secretary; Kepler Stone, vice-president; and president Peter Borelli prepare a demonstration of oxidation.

After two years of planning, a science club in Weston High School has finally been established. Divided into two sections, the highly effective nature of the organization has been shown by both the constant notices of meetings and the success of member's projects.

The biology section, under the direction of Mr. Irving Keene, has attempted to acquaint its members with biology in the town. Bicycle trips and other excursions to town forests and the Arnold Arboretum have provided a means to this end.

With Mr. Irving Marsden as advisor, the physical science section had an exciting program of field trips and well-known speakers, with Dr. Walter Stockmayer opening the club's program speaking on a new brand of "Meatballs and Spaghetti."

The two sections of the club planned and organized the Science Fair this year, and together have made a place for themselves on the roster of truly functional groups.

Among Weston High School's more talkative clubs is the Announcers Club which, under the direction of Mr. John Zorn, handles the vital job of running the "morning announcements." Members read the Bible passage and any announcements submitted by groups, individuals, or teachers relating to subjects from club meetings to lost dogs.

Membership in the Announcers' Club is on the basis of an audition for testing voice quality and enunciation before the senior members. Also constituting an important part of the club are the technicians who handle the control board in the office.

Again this year the Announcers' Club has taken field trips to acquaint the members with various facets of radio communication. Mr. Zorn deserves a great deal of credit for setting such high standards of ability and conduct for its members and for making this club one of the most active in the school.

The Talents and Efforts of Many Young Musicians

Choir members raise their voices in melodious harmony.

Weston High School's choir, always a successful musical organization, this year has set, a new high in attendance with one hundred and thirty members. This has created the problem of a shortage in choir robes, which has been alleviated by the willingness of the freshmen to practice with the choir, but to forego performing in public. Not so easily alleviated has been the shortage of male voices, but the choir has had a rewarding year nevertheless, from its Christmas assembly to its immensely appreciated part in the Spring Concert.

Besides the choir, upperclass girls have the opportunity to sing in smaller groups. The Melodears and the Wrong Notes, handle a repertoire ranging from "Sleep Holy Babe" to "Santa Baby." These groups, entirely self-organized, entertain themselves and their listeners.

Combine to Make Weston's Able Musical Groups

In 1958-59, forty-eight students combined their musical talents to produce another successful year for the Weston High School Orchestra. Representing all the classes in both the junior and senior high schools, they practiced together diligently, achieving a high standard of quality. The orchestra participated in school functions such as the Christmas and Honor Society Assemblies. A string group, composed of leading violinists, violists, cellists, and basses performed at the school play, providing music both before curtain time and between the acts.

This year, the entire orchestra attended the music festival in Belmont where they received high commendation from the judges. The orchestra climaxed its year at the annual Spring Concert, held at the Country School.

A great deal of credit for the orchestra's outstanding year is due President Diane Dolan, Concert Mistresses Armine Avakian and Beth Parsons, and to conductor Mr. Robert O. Corley.

The right side of the orchestra includes first and second violins, clarinets, trombones, a bassoon, an oboe, saxophones, trumpets, and the percussions.

The left side of the orchestra includes piano, violas, French horns, and basses.

Enjoyed by the School and the Community.

The Weston High School Band, under the able direction of Mr. Robert O. Corley, performed an unusually commendable repertoire in 1958-9 with outstanding performances in precision marching on the football field and highly rated demonstrations of concert work. A novel innovation for the band in 1958 was the institution of formations ranging from square dances to wagon wheels, all between the halves of the football games. The intricate formations were hailed as near-collegiate in quality by the spectators at the games.

The thirty-two members of the band represent all four classes at Weston High School. There also exists, however, a great musical potential in the elementary and junior high schools, which promises to fill more than adequately any vacancies in the band due to graduation. This situation, along with the continued leadership of Mr. Corley, will enable the band to maintain its status as a leading school organization.

Assisting the band were the majorettes, Maribeth Hanson, Miriam Kilgore, Marie Larsen, Barbara Wyman, Ann Jones, and Janet Tenneson.

The Play Cast Produces a Play Enjoyed by All

Following many years of plays under the direction of Mr. John Zorn a very successful production of "You Can't Take It With You" was presented to SRO audiences on December 12 and December 13. The senior players — Ann Winsor, Susan Ferries, Chuck Howard, Laurie Shepardson, Sally Murphy, and Palmer Koelb — were excellent in their portrayals of the various character parts as were the other members of the cast.

This year the scenery was again very realistic and much praise is due to Mr. Hale and the people associated with its production. The construction crew had a unique job for this production; that of creating the background for a messy, unpredictable household. All those who saw the play know what a splendid job they did.

The combination of scenery, excellent direction, eight weeks of rehearsal, and undying spirit were some of the reasons why the cast performed so well. Many people in the audience were surprised and delighted to see their classmates and relatives acting with such ease and ability on the stage.

As the play closed with a supper of blintzes cooked by a Russian duchess, the cast could look back with satisfaction on a laudable job.

Ann Winsor flits across the stage as she was wont to do.

Supervised by B. Morrison, B. Shaw, V. Capoccia, S. Murphy, and C. Howard, Miss D. Otis from Emerson College puts make-up on Ann Winsor.

Football, Popular with Both Athletes and Spectators,

Each year, two or three days before school reconvenes, the football team begins its vigorous practice sessions. After the long summer sun and the fresh air of summer the players don their clean stiff sweatshirts and yellow football pants to start on their athletic endeavors for the year.

Thirty-five seniors and underclassmen turned out for the varsity squad in the forty-third football season at Weston. Led by co-captains Bill Connolly and John Perry, the team showed tremendous drive and spirit throughout the year, although the loss of four starters through injuries hampered the final record.

Team play was highlighted by the brilliant linework of the co-captains, the all-round performance of Quarterback Buzz Granholm, the fierce offensive running by Jay Adams, and the effective play of Sophomore Forbes McMullin before his injury.

The season featured such epic plays as last-second

With the coming of winter, football players and trackmen scurry indoors and channel their extracurricular interests in other directions; in the gym, the boards thunder and the nets swish as basketball becomes the center of attention. Under Coach Robert Carini Weston basketball in past years has earned a tradition of success, and in 1959, Co-captains Steve Lawson and Terry Dunn led their spirited team to a victorious season. Throughout the season spectators were treated to see Weston pull into the lead during the last minutes of play and go on to win by two and three point margins.

Backed up by the scoring onslaughts of Terry Dunn and Buzz Granholm, the Wildcat hoopsters won ten of thirteen regular season games. Having qualified for the Tech Tourney, the team had the misfortune of being matched with Bourne, the Cape Cod championship team. At Quincy, Bourne, which later went into the tourney finals, defeated Weston 70—44. Weston's disappointment was tempered by the realization that they had lost the lead only after the first half; hampered by fouls, the Wildcats were outscored by Bourne's driving team. Both in the Dual County League, where Weston finished second to undefeated Wayland, and in the Tech Tourney, Weston showed a tremendous degree of team cooperation and spirit.

The Basketball Teams Enjoy a Successful Season.

Highlighted by tremendous spirit and an outstanding record, the girls' basketball team completed a successful season. The girls, coached by Miss Marie Butera, demonstrated a high degree of cooperation in overcoming teams from schools larger than Weston High School.

The two losses of the season, at the hands of Wellesley and Lincoln-Sudbury, proved to be the most exciting of the games. In scoring, the team was led by sharp-shooting Barbara Wyman who scored 56 points. Gail Graham backed her up with 42 points. The low scores of the opposition indicated the effectiveness of the guards' defensive play. The record of 5 wins, 2 losses, and 1 tie rewarded the team for its fiercely competitive efforts.

Battling the final buzzer, Edith Larkin vainly fires a set-shot from mid-court during the Lincoln-Sudbury game.

Barbi King exercises her wrists at passing practice as Celia Melone, Debbie Graves, Miss Butera, Reggie Curtin, and Posy Lombard watch.

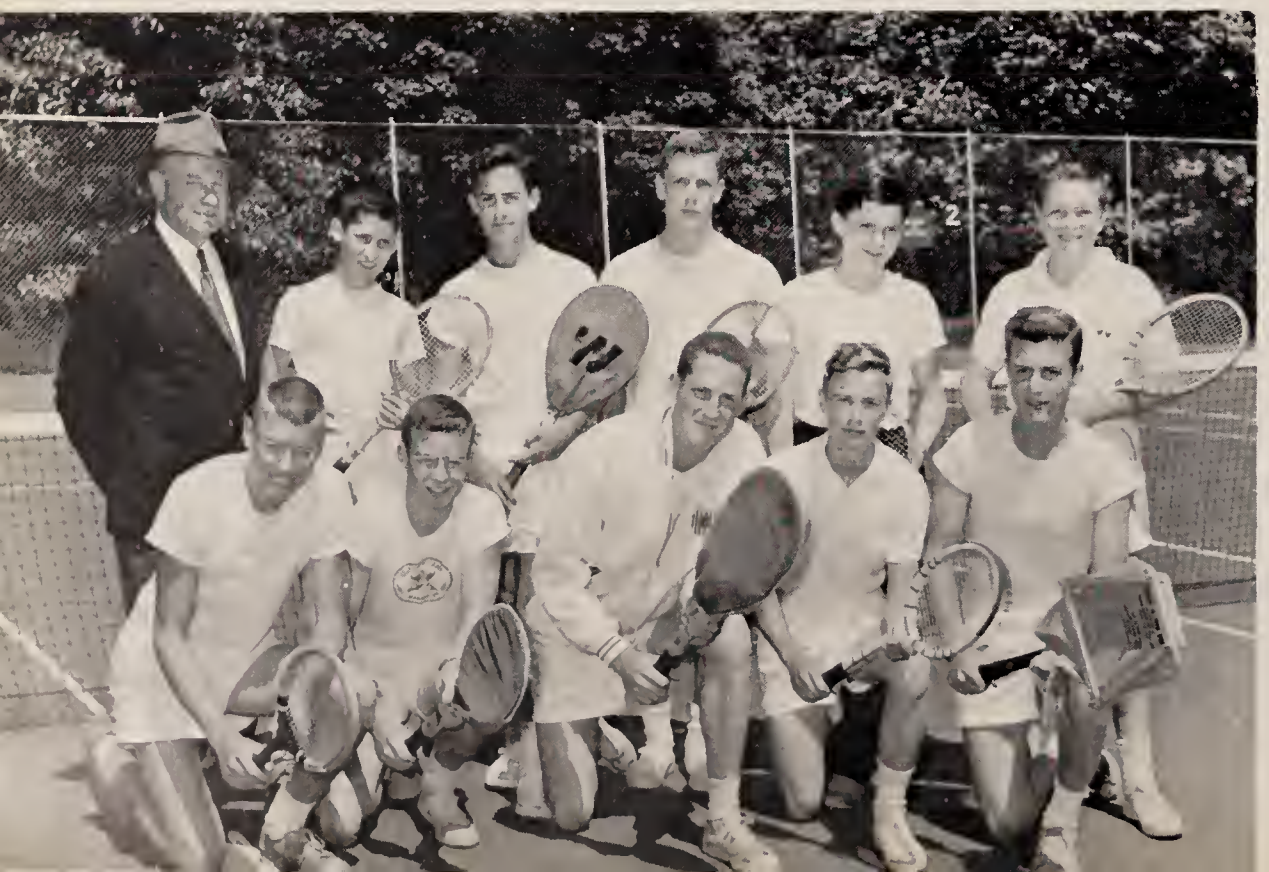
Spring Sports Attract Enthusiastic Athletes

Weston's girls' and boys' tennis teams matured magnificently in their fourth season, both gaining undefeated records on their respective schedules. Led by the spectacular playing of John Wyman and Bob Wilkes's consistently powerful shots, the boys defeated Westwood, Newton J. V., and Lexington twice, while defeating Concord and tying Noble and Greenough. The girls triumphed over Walpole, Wellesley, Westwood, Concord, and Newton.



BOYS' TENNIS TEAM. FRONT: R. Wilkes, C. Janeway, J. Wyman, R. Ayers, R. Langenbach. REAR: Mr. J. Proctor, coach; D. Gardella, T. Carter, F. Crawford, P. Comeau, W. Vaughn.

GIRLS' TENNIS TEAM. FRONT: A. Kellogg, S. McGuire, B. Wyman, A. Corman. REAR: M. Hanson, P. Lombard.

John Perry explains the fine points of holding the club to the golf team's only girl, Edith Larkin.

Who Spend Many Hours a Week Practicing

Golf is a new sport at Weston, but this year's team showed no growing pains. Coached by Driver-Education Instructor, Mr. Leo Cronan, and led on the fairways by senior John Perry, Weston's squad met and outplayed teams from Marlboro, Northboro, Southboro, Hopkinton, and Wayland, and was defeated only by Westboro and Ashland. This strong Weston team played its home tourneys on the fine links of the Weston Golf Club, thanks to the generosity of the club's directors.

GOLF TEAM. FRONT: R. DeAmbrose, L. Forman, P. Borelli. REAR: Mr. L. Cronan, E. Larkin, W. Duffy, P. Mueller, J. Perry, J. Crowe, J. Rote, R. Newbert.

To Acquire Proficiency in the Various Sports

Highlighted by a smashing 12—0 victory over arch-rival Wayland, the girls' softball team went on to finish with a creditable 4—3 record. Their strongest adversary was neighboring Lincoln-Sudbury. In the first encounter of the two teams, Weston was defeated 14—0; although they fought valiantly in the second game, they were edged out by three runs, 14—11. Concord, Walpole, and Wayland provided easy victories for the girls.

Esther Lombard and Dot White formed an exceptional battery, compiling a first-rate strike-out record. In the infield Gail Graham, Betty O'Toole, and Pat Gilligan discouraged would-be base thieves with their quick throws and accurate fielding, while Paula Toner handled action between second and third bases. An outfield of Ellie Tomlinson, Joan Walker, and Ann Healey cost the opposition many extra base hits, and Ellie's power furnished the team's runs-batted-in and was a great asset in the outfield with her powerful arm. The marvelous cooperation resulted in a happy and successful season.

And Winning Weston Many Athletic Laurels

1958 was a building year for the baseball team at Weston High. The squad was inexperienced, drawing most of its members from freshman and sophomore ranks, and this inexperience showed against the strong teams of the Dual County League. The high point of the season was a brilliant victory as the young Wildcats toppled the league-champion Wayland team, 1—0, in a thrill packed game, marked by a protest which was later withdrawn by Wayland.

Distance runner Steve Richardson demonstrates one of the methods used by the cross-country team in "limbering up."

Thus Sports Play a Large Part in Weston's Mosaic.

Another autumn sport for boys at Weston High School was introduced to the athletic curriculum several years ago to balance the traditional American game of football. Now the eager student may participate in the ancient international sport of cross-country running. What football teaches the young man in hard body contact and quick thinking, long distance running teaches in endurance and courage in the face of extreme fatigue.

Last fall a few hardy upperclassmen joined the team, built around returning lettermen Read Langenbach and Lars Rydell, with senior Bob Wilkes, running for his first year, turning in an impressive record. In six tries against Lexington, Woburn, North Andover, Stoneham, Everett Vocational, and Bedford, the team was not victorious, although a strong placement in the league meet showed a quite powerful team for a school of Weston's size.

LINED UP ARE: A. Johnson, K. Stone, D. Valentine, S. Richardson, R. DeAmbrose, B. Wilkes, P. Borelli, J. Whittemore, E. Hoagland, J. Harnish, D. Macdonald, L. Wells, B. Eddy, R. Langenbach, L. Rydell.
